FIFTIETH YEAR. NUMBER 272 | CIRCLEVILLE, OHIO, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1933 | THREE CENTS

Did you Know

By Pat J. Kirwin

THAT the first discovery of the remains of ancient inhabitants in Circleville was made on Aug. 20, 1822. The Olive Branch of the time offers the following account:

"While some mechanics were digging near the corner of the square fort, they came to a strata of earth differing in quality and color from that which composed the wall generally, in which reposed the skeletons of several human beings which had probably been mouldering for centuries. Although it is known that Circleville was many centuries ago inhabited by a tribe of so-called mound builders, this is the first positive evidence. The discovery of the skeletons was made about 10 feet from the summit of the wall of the fort. The bones extended nine or 10 feet from head to foot.

That the following "cow story" was recounted in an issue of The Olive Branch of 1824: "A farmer in this county had a cow that died immediately after bringing forth a living calf. The body of the cow was opened through motives of curiosity, where incredible to relate, 59 completely formed calves were found, varying in size. The one before mentioned made 60. Ohio and Pickaway-co against the world!"

That Wesley Work, a Pickaway-twp farmer, in 1870, was the hero in the fight against the dreadful mad itch, a disease which formerly attacked cattle in the fall of the year. This disease was well known in the 1860's and 1870's. In the fall of 1870, the disease had begun and was spreading throughout Pickaway-co. Many valuable cattle were dying from the ravages of mad itch. According to The Herald of the time, one evening while going home in his horse and buggy, Mr. Work improvised a remedy which cured and later helped exterminate the disease. His remedy was a mixture of whiskey and milk applied to the animal every 24 hours.

THAT outspoken notices were published in the newspapers of 100 years ago. In those days, borrowing, instead of hiring horses appeared to be in vogue. Mr. James Bell, Circleville, seemed to be afflicted in this way, so he published the following notice:

"In order to prevent importunity, I am induced to give public notice that henceforth I will not lend my horse to any person . . so please don't bother me about it."

Petty thievery was apparently being practiced at this time, as we find the following notice in the same issue:

"M:.

YOU STOLE MY SHINGLES . . . and I can prove it. I'll give you 10 days to come forward with the goods or look out for the consequences."

That morning baths in the Scioto river were quite popular during the summer heat of 1870. Commenting on this, The Herald of July 29, 1870, had the following to say: "A citizen of our city 'went in' the other morning and the residents along the river further down now complain of the muddy appearance of the water."

That the saloons of 60 years ago apparently handled other things beside the "spirituous liquors." The Democrat and Watchman of November, 1872, has the following comment about business:

"The saloons of the city, some 18 of them, appear to be doing a thriving business. A majority of them are crowded with parties of ladies and gentlemen every evening in quest of ICE CREAM, CAKE, LEMONADE and bon vivants."

That due to an extreme heat wave, there was a scarcity of ice in Circleville during the summer of 1870. It was almost impossible to buy even a few pounds. The heat was so extreme, newspapers of the time report, that a load of ice being brought from Columbus would melt before it reached this city.

Political Non - Aggression is Bargain; Japan Worry is Ended

Americans in Russia Pleased With Act

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.— A virtual pact of political non-aggression in return for complete capitulation by the Soviets on practically everything desired by the United States was the bargain on which President Roosevelt and Maxim Litvinoff, the Soviet foreign commissar, based their agreement for resumption of normal relations between the two nations.

This was learned today as the United States and the Soviet Union enjoyed the first day of offical relations since establishment of the Soviet regime 16 years ago.

Although the series of understandings on which resumption of normal relations was based did not mention a non-agression pact, one of these understandings contained the same wording incorporated in the basis of the political non-agression pacts which the Soviets have with several European nations.

LITVINOFF REQUEST

Furthermore, it was learned Litvinoff requested this particular understanding in return for the concessions granted by the Soviets.

Although worded in a roundabout way, the understanding provides in effect that neither nation will engage in or permit military activities within their own territories aimed at armed struggle with one another.

MOSCOW, Nov. 18.—Russia today hailed American recognition as a triumphant achievement for the Soviet regime and as a substantial contribution to the cause of world peace.

While official comment still was awaited, Russians of all walks of life—peasants, workers, engineers, and government officials—expressed great enthusiasm over the formal recognition of communist Russia by the world's greatest capitalist nation.

Japan was frequently mentioned in every discussion of the event, the general impression being that Russia has far less to fear in the for east now that the United States "is on her side."

LIQUOR PLAN IDEAS DIFFER

Hope For Early Decision In Legislature Wanes; Meets On December 6.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 18.—While a Senate committee was engaged in drafting a bill embodying recommendations of the governor's advisory liquor commission here today, hope that a state liquor control program could be speedily enacted when the legislature meets in special session on Dec. 6 began to wane.

Reactions of members of the legislature and other persons who have actively interested themselves in liquor control legislation indicated that while the advisory commission's plan has the hearty endorsement of many it is condemned as unsatisfactory by many others.

It appeared almost certain that not only the bill containing the advisory commission's recommendations but several others as well will be introduced at the special session.

Gov. George White, absent from the capital, has not announced whether his advisors' plans meet with his entire approval. The plan called for a state liquor monopoly under a commission of three, with sale of liquor by the glass permitted only in licensed hotels, restaurants and clubs when meals are served.

A number of legislators objected to the state government entering the liquor business. One of these was Sen. Carl D. Sheppard, D. Akron. Another was Sen. Joseph N. Ackerman, R. Cleveland, former chairman of the Senate liquor committee.

The liquor report also drew fire from groups opposed to selling liquor by the glass under any circumstances In this category was the Ohio Anti-Saloon league.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Call, of Columbus, announce the birth of a son at Grant hospital, Columbus, Thursday, Nov. 16. Mrs. Call before her marriage was Miss Grace Shook, Jackson-twp.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Wright, 2151 Larch-st, Springfield, announce the birth of a son, Lloyd Thomas Thursday, Nov. 9. Mrs. Wright is the former Miss Lovie Laughlin, daughter of Mrs. Addie Laughlin, this city.

Many Benefits To Both Sides

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.— Principal benefits to be derived from the restoration of normal relations between the United States and Soviet Russia are expected to be'

The United States; the sale of millions of dollars worth of agricultural machinery, automobiles and other accessories, cotton, rubbers, metals, chemicals and electrical supplies if satisfactory credits can be arranged.

Soviet Russia; tremendous enhancement of Soviet prestige and a strengthening of the Russian position in the Far East, where trouble has threatened to develop with Japan.

Report Reconciliation of Fairbanks' Is Near

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 18.—Mary Pickford, film star, is planning a trip to New York next month, it was learned today.

Which caused Hollywood to wonder whether there might be a meeting there with her estranged husband, Douglas Fairbanks, who was reported in Hollywood to be coming back to the United States from Europe—next month.

Representatives of Miss Pickford said that her proposed trip would be "for business only."

She hurried right to the scene and the fight commenced.

ELECTION COST REPORTED LOW

Candidates for office in this city had very little expense according to reports filed with Harry E. Weill, clerk of the board of elections. Friday at 6:30 p. m. was the deadline for filing.

FREE-FOR-ALL CONTEST SEEN FOR CONGRESS

Underwood's Seat to Be Fought for By Number of District Democrats

SPANGLER, DAY IN

Underwood-or - McKenzie But Not Both

It is quite a while until the next election but the political bee appears to be buzzing in the bonnets of a number of persons in the Eleventh Ohio district with Mell G. Underwood's seat in Congress as the principal objective.

The district comprises Pickaway, Ross, Fairfield, Hocking and Perry counties, and just about every one of the counties is expected to have a candidate in the race. Nothing has been heard from Hocking-co and nothing from Perry-co where Mr. Underwood resides, but each of the others is certain to place a candidate against the veteran congressman.

Pickaway, according to his own statements, will have William I. Spangler, former state senator from Tarlton, in the scuffle. He's an avowed candidate. Mr. Spangler intended to be a candidate for the county board of education this fall then run for Congress next year but, after filing his petition for the county board, he decided the 'dirt' stirred up in that fight would injure his chances for the Democratic nomination for Congress. Accordingly, he withdrew from the board race, and wisely, too.

HEAR CUNNINGHAM

The name of Russell Cunningham, former prosecuting attorney and American Legion leader, has been pushed to the front in Lancaster, and several other names have been rumored, not near so strongly as has Mr. Cunningham's, however.

Then we turn to Ross-co and find much activity. Louis M. Day, attorney, became an avowed candidate for the office during the present week and in a statement to a Chillicothe newspaper said he felt he was "as well equipped as any other citizen in the Eleventh Ohio district for the position, and he felt that he could give the constituency as good if not better service than had been given by Mr. Underwood or any of his predecessors going a long way back."

Mr. Day said that he felt that since Ross-co has two federal in-

Face Death in Hart Kidnaping

California's severe anti-kidnaping law will be invoked in the cases of Thomas H. Thurmond, left above, and J. M. "Jack" Holmes, right, who, according to police have confessed to the kidnaping and slaying of Brooke E. Hart, 22-year-old son of a San Jose, Cal., merchant. Captured while placing a phone call demanding ransom Thurmond and Holmes are said to have told police they slugged young Hart and dumped his body into San Francisco bay from the bridge shown in the photo above.

Hart Body Still Eludes Hunters

State Seeks All Corroborating Testimony in Case Against Brutal Murderers of Scion; 'Mystery Woman' Reported Sought By Police.

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 18.— "There must be no slipup in the case against the confessed murders and kidnapers of Brooke Hart."

With this declaration, District Attorney Fred Thomas of Santa Clara-co issued orders today to police to obtain statements from every person with tangible knowledge of the brutal slaying.

"We have the signed confessions of Jack Holmes and Thomas Thurmond that they bound their victim with baling wire and shot several times at him after throwing him from the San Mateo bridge into lower San Francisco bay," District Attorney Thomas said.

"But we must have corroborating testimony. We must have an airtight case. There must be no slipup."

Then with deliberate conviction in his voice, Thomas pounded his fist on his desk and declared:

"These men deserve hanging and that's what they'll get."

STILL HUNT BODY

While the wheels of legal justice were grinding toward swift justice and a speedy trial, preliminary hearing of which probably will be next week, under California's new kidnap statute making abduction where bodily harm is done a death penalty, the grim search of lower San Francisco bay continued for the body of Hart.

Carrying out Thomas' orders police obtained statements from two Oakland wood gatherers, Vin-

CCC Youths Go To Pacific Coast

Word has been received here that local youths who left with the second contingent in the Forest army are at Fort Bragg, California.

Howard Caudill wrote to his parents telling them the group is only 400 yards from the Pacific ocean.

Word from Doyle Hulse, Jackson-twp, to his parents discloses that the remaining members of the first contingent have been moved nearer the ocean.

More about Hulse's letter will be published next week.

WOOD AND BRIGGS TO ADDRESS C. C.

The proposed raising of the road between the Scioto river and the Crites elevator, west of this city, will be discussed Tuesday evening at the Chamber of Commerce meeting by Ralph Wood, of the county engineer's office, and Bryce Briggs, of the state highway department.

This matter has long been of interest to this city and to residents of townships west of town and the talks are expected to be interesting.

The meeting starts at 6:15 p. m.

Dinner Planned As Homecoming Feature

A feature of the homecoming and reunion service of the United Brethren church, Sunday, will be the family dinner at noon in the Community house. Members and friends are urged to take their Sunday dinners and enjoy the fellowship of the hour.

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 18.—Thomas Thurmond, one of the confessed kidnaper-slayers of Brooke Hart, went to church last Sunday and when the pastor called upon his congregation members to arise in silent prayer for the safe return of young Hart, Thurmond bowed his head in ostensible prayer along with the rest.

CRICLEVILLE MEN IN AUTO COLLISION

Starkey was driving south in an Oldsmobile coach and Howard Fox was driving a Buick north.

After the cars collided Fox lost control of his car and it struck a culvert.

Both cars were damaged.

Deputy Sheriff Bryan Custer investigated.

A great philosopher was looking for a word that to his mind would express the highest in human life. It came to him in the word—"I Ought." Life imposes upon us all some obligation. The measure in which we meet our obligation determines our character for time and eternity. We dare not be shirkers. Every evasion of a responsibility brings upon us a punishment. It is self-inflicted. The church emphasises life's imperatives. It finds its message in the words of the Bible. It places God upon the throne. It makes the example of Jesus the final arbiter. Go to church tomorrow. Take a friend.

We have no creed but Christ and use no name but His. "He is the head over all things to His church, the pillar and ground of the truth." In this day when people are following dictators it is well to read again the inspired word which says "There is none other name under heaven that is given among men whereby ye must be saved" and Jesus said, as he left the earth after his resurrection from the dead, "All authority is given unto men in heaven and on earth."
It might be surprising to know that the minister, R. Tibbs Maxey, came to Circleville a little over two years ago and began with no members and now there are 61 enrolled.

MAN'S NEED OF THE CHURCH

Dr. Charles E. Jefferson has said, "No man is in his place as long as he is out of the church. To say that a man can be as good outside as inside the church is absurd. As well one might say that a man who continuously neglects his civic duties is as good a citizen as the man who performs them. Man is a home-making animal and he mars his life if he is not loyal to the home. He is a political animal and he curtails his life if he is not faithful to the state. He is a religious animal and if he holds aloof from the church he starves and stunts the highest instincts of his nature." Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

There is a difference in age-groups. Young adolescents are likely to respond more quickly than adults. In fact in adult classes some may be timid and easily embarrassed by direct questions if such questions seem to expose their ignorance; but a boy or girl is not so easily embarassed. In the case of youth they can be more direct. Some times it is wise to have questions written on a blackboard or distributed beforehand to allow time for thought. Where lesson study is pursued by the pupils, questions serve well as a means of testing such study.

Discussion Questions on S.S. Lesson

Discussion Questions on the Sunday school lesson, Paul in Athens, Acts 17:16-34 for Sunday, Nov. 19.

1. How can we train ourselves to meet objections to Christianity?
2. What are the chief hindrances to worship?
3. How may these hindrances be overcome?
4. What happens to us when we find God and are conscious of his presence?
5. What is God like?
6. What are some of the good points as learned from this lesson in the introduction to a sermon or any speech?
7. How judge the results of a sermon?

Gladstone says, "I hold more strongly than ever to this conviction deepened and strengthened by long experience of the reality, the nearness and the personality of God."
Lesson Prayer, "We would know thee as our Father and every man as our brother; we would worship thee truly and ever live in Thy presence; that all these things may be realized we pray for the guidance of the Holy Spirit."

PAUL IN ATHENS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 17:16-34.
GOLDEN TEXT—For in him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said, For we are also his offspring. Acts 17:28.
PRIMARY TOPIC — Worshiping God.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Preaching in a Famous City.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why Do We Worship?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Seeking and Finding God.

I. Athens Full of Idols (v. 16).

Athens was the intellectual metropolis of the world at that time, the home of the world's greatest eloquence and philosophy. In spite of this fact the city was given wholly to idolatry, which so stirred Paul's spirit that he was there moved to preach the gospel. He knew that despite wealth and learning the Athenians needed the gospel as much as did also the poor and the ignorant.

II. The Parties Concerned in the Controversy (vv. 17-21).

1. The Jews (v. 17). True to his usual custom, Paul went into the synagogue and entered into earnest argument with the Jews.
2. The devout persons (v. 17). This doubtless included proselytes to the Jewish faith.
3. The philosophers (v. 18). From the Jews and devout persons he turned to such as were found in the market place. Here he came into touch with Epicurean and Stoic philosophers. When these philosophers heard his preaching they desired to know what new doctrine he preached, so they invited him to Areopagus where he might speak to them. They inquired as to what this "babbler" might say. The word "babbler" means literally "seed-picker." They conceived Paul as a globe-trotter who had gathered up seeds of truth or error here and there over the world and that he was somewhat like themselves, interested in talking about that which he had seen and heard.

III. Paul's Address on Mars' Hill (vv. 22-31).

1. The introduction (vv. 22, 23). He introduced his discourse in a courteous manner, stating that he perceived that they were very religious. He did not accuse them of superstition as the A. V. would hake it, but as the A. R. V., "very religious." He declared that as he was viewing their city he beheld an altar with an inscription, "To the unknown God." He proceeded at once to connect it with the idea of the true God, implying that their altar had been erected to him.
2. The body of his discourse (vv. 24-81).

a. A declaration concerning God (vv. 24, 25).

(1) The true God created the material universe (v. 24). This was a direct blow at the philosophy of both the Epicureans and the Stoics.
(2) God's spirituality and immensity (vv. 24, 25). Being essentially spiritual he demands heart-service, and being transcendent above all he is not confined to earthly temples.
(3) His active providence (v. 25). He gives existence to all things. He bestows needed gifts upon all creatures, and as sovereign directs all things.

b. His declarations concerning man (vv. 26-31).

(1) His common origin (v. 26). This was a blow at the foolish Athenian pride which supposed that they were superior to all other people. This proposition he proved from their own literature (v. 28). He argued that if men are the offspring of God and bear his likeness, it is utter folly to make images such as the senseless idols were.
(2) Nations have their place by the sovereign purpose of God (v. 26). He argued that the position and mission of each nation is of God's appointment.
(3) Men should seek God (v. 27). His goodness and grace in supplying all human needs, and his sovereign ordering of the affairs of nations should move men to see and seek God.
(4) Pressing obligations to repent (vv. 30, 31). This was his supreme message. Though God had formerly passed over the idolatrous practice of the nations, he now calls all men to repent in preparation for the coming day of judgment, the guarantee of which is the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead.

IV. The Results of Paul's Preaching (vv. 32-34).

1. Some mocked (v. 32). Men and women are today mocking the preacher who dares to preach the coming judgment.
2. Some procrastinated (v. 32). This is the common way of men. Many of them do not mock, but they hesitate to accept and act upon the urgency of the message.
3. Some believed (v. 34). Wherever the gospel is preached there are some who believe and are saved

CHRISTIANITY'S APPEAL TO YOUTH

Christianity has a particular appeal to youth in its call to chivalry, to courage to adventure. Its essence is the personality of Jesus, a young man Himself, rather than the dogmatic creeds and doctrines of other religions.
A great many youthful Christian leaders have caught the inspiration of Christ's personality and have accomplished wonders. John Wesley founded the Holy Club at Oxford at the age of 26. Martin Luther climbed the Santa Scala at Rome at 27. Jeremy Taylor was holding men spellbound at St. Paul's, London, at 18. Dwight L. Moody was doing evangelistic work at 23. Charles H. Spurgeon was preaching at the great London tabernacle at 20. Francis E. Clark founded the Christian Endeavor at 29. George Williams founded the Young Men's Christian Association at 23. David Livingstone was doing a marvelous piece of missionary work in the heart of Africa at 23.
C. E. Adams in his book, "What I Owe to Christ" has said: "More than any other figure in human history Jesus represents for all time the youth of man confronting undismayed obstacles inconceivably great and conquering them by the daring of His Spirit."

Favor Princeton To Defeat Navy

By DAVIS J. WALSH

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 18.—Princeton, the only team in the country that has neither been beaten nor tied nor scored upon nor in any way sullied by allien hands, will take its immaculate record out there in the light of day again this afternoon, this time for a little marksmanship on the part of the United States Naval academy. There have been times when the United States Naval academy proved to be a marksman that bullseyed everything but this isn't one of them.

Beaten badly by Pittsburgh and convincingly by Columbia, the Navy hasn't a great deal, except the traditional Navy fight. It is a little light in man-power and a little short of punch. Moreover, the word is that Gordan Chung-Hoon, one of the best of its ball-runners, is insufficiently recovered from a recent injury and might not be right for this game. If he isn't Navy's chances of working an overnight miracle will be fewer and these were all too few, as it was.

BEAT NOTRE DAME

The middies did beat Notre Dame but, after all, this seems to provide neither distinction nor novelty. In fact, if you don't beat Notre Dame nowadays, you go to the nearest window and let the air have plenty of weight.

As for Princeton, it has been both good and fortunate this season in running up a total of 151 to 0 against a combined opposition provided by Amherst, Williams, Columbia, W. & L., Brown and Dartmouth.

It was fortunate against W. & L., a team of no great pretentions but which nevertheless held the Tiger to one touchdown and itself crossed the goal line, only to be recalled by a penalty. But Princeton was good, very good, against Columbia and Brown, two major opponents, and so the cast, badly needing a little moral sustenance, is looking to the Tiger to retrieve some degree of self-respect from the tatters of its impaired prestige.

The Tiger is a very good retriever. It is a team of opportunists, similar to the 1933 "destiny men," and, as such, seemingly capable of topping any bid the Navy may care to make. In addition, if the first line of retrievers does not give complete satisfaction, there is a second and even a third line, the whole apparently constituting a plurality as far as the Navy is concerned.

Furthermore there is a young man in the backfield by the name of Le Van who, they aver, has everything. If he has, all I've got to say is that this is a very great deal.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

Cincinnati baseball fans are already greeting Larry MacPhail, their new president-to-be, for his trading ability * * * They regret the loss of Red Lucas, a pitcher of parts, but they also greet the addition of Tony Piet and Adam Comorosky from Pittsburgh and Glenn Spencer from New York * * MacPhail had to give up two other members of the team George Grantham and Wolly Roettger * * * * *

Pittsburghers incidentally are doubtful of the value of the Piet-Comorosky for Lucas-Roettger swap as far as they are concerned * * * * * *

It looked today as though Foster Bales, local athlete, would not appear in Princeton's lineup against the Navy, because of his shoulder injuries * * * This injury, a painful one no doubt, has kept the youth who was expected to be a star performer with this year's great team from performing in the last several games. Fans here are pulling for Princeton to go through the season undefeated and to get the Rose Bowl bid * * * Bales is certain to be ready to go at that time and more power to the halfback whom Coach Fritz Crisler calls "the fightingest man on the squad."

Columbus high school football reaches its climax today with West and East meet at Ohio stadium for the city championship * * * East hold a light edge and should win * * * Coach Harley Pearce's South hi outfit whipped Central 26-7, Friday.

NEED CLOTHING

Besides the money to be paid in wages, Henderson has asked the C. W. A. headquarters in Washington for an appropriation of $753,000 to be spent in Ohio for the purchase of work clothes for the re-employed men.

Many of them, he said, have seen their own funds so depleted during their long idleness that they would be unable to work in severe weather in such clothing as they now possess.

For them the C. W. A. will provide warm clothing and shoes, practically all of which will be bought from merchants in the districts where the workers reside if they are able to supply goods in sufficient quantities and at a reasonable price, Henderson announced.

C. W. A. headquarters has been deluged with local projects for the employment of men under the new program.

All C. W. A. jobs must be largely labor projects. The workers will be paid out of federal funds, but the government will not assume the cost of materials, other than allowed under the regular program of the Public Works Administration.

Further stimulus to the gigantic re-employment drive was added by the state highway department which announced it would advance $500,000 monthly for C. W. A. highway projects, expecting to be repaid later by the government.

"Growing up With Books"

ALL over the United States, the present week is known as "BOOK WEEK." This is the fifteenth year in which this festival has been observed in libraries, schools, and book shops all over the country.

"Growing up with books" is the central theme chosen for the 1933 week, its selection pointing out the fact that the children of today are growing up in a world where they seem destined to have more leisure hours than any previous generation has known.

Committees on the use of leisure time have been organized in many cities, but, without being organized and directed, the great majority of men and women, boys and girl, are using all extra time they may have to follow their own chosen pastimes and recreations. Reading has always been the most universal occupation of leisure, and, surprising as it has been to those who have expected the movies, radio, and other distractions, to lessen the number of readers, the contrary has been true and libraries have experienced a constantly increasing demand for books and information.

Parents and teachers, looking ahead to the "new era" want to see that all children acquire the reading habit, and have wide and easy access to books. Circleville, from its earliest days, recognized the need for good reading, and the Circleville Public Library, for more than sixty years, has made every week a "Book Week" in the communitl. While no elaborate plans have been made to celebrate the designated week, the library is in the midst of a busy period of preparing new juvenile books for circulation, assisting teachers in making out "Reading lists," enrolling new borrowers and meeting the "after school" rush.

Join the Red Cross

THE RED CROSS is beginning its annual roll call. It invites the American people to come to its support by pledging or renewing their membership at the nominal fee of one dollar.

There is in the United States no organization more deserving of popular approval and support than the Red Cross. None, we believe, will dispute this. Its field of active service is as wide as human suffering. In the midst of war and disease, pestilence and hunger it is found pursuing courageously and efficiently its task of ministering to the needs of those requiring help.

New duties were found by the Red Cross in connection with the depression. Assistance, in the way of food and clothing, was given by it to more than 25,000,000 persons in the last 18 months. This it did without neglecting in any way its regular duties. More than 117 communities in which disaster in some major form had struck felt its hand or relief. Its numberous other duties were performed with an unmatched devotion to its ideal of service.

The Red Cross has a large membership in Circleville and Pickaway-co. It hopes that all present members will renew their membership and that new ones will come into the organization from this state.

No call is too great or too far away for the Red Cross to answer. It stands ready at all hours of the day and night to respond. When disaster strikes in the way of floods, earthquakes or other form, its representatives are haongmet etao g?FBinmloo among the first on the scene.

It has a record of service probably unmatched by that of any organization. Quick and efficient service is given, which makes its work of double value.

The American people owe a great debt to the Red Cross. To show their appreciation of what it has done and is doing is a duty resting upon them. They have an opportunity to do this at a financial cost which few can not afford.

"THAT'S MY BOY!"

by FRANCIS WALLACE
AUTHOR OF "HUDDLE"

SYNOPSIS

After three brilliant seasons as a varsity back for Thorndyke, "Big Jeff" Randolph is about to close his collegiate football career in the annual Tournament of Roses game on New Year's Day. Back home in tiny Athens, mid-west factory town, "Jeff's" adoring Mom is listening to the game on the radio. To her the giant "Jeff" is still her little Tommy of yesteryears who first starred at "the football" in high school so well that he was lured east to the wealthy and historic Thorndyke institution. Pop and Uncle Louie have gone downtown to hear the returns. One of the neighbor's children invites Mom to listen on his big set but she declines the invitation. . . .

CHAPTER THIRTY-SIX

He ran back across the street, flying. Joie was a nice boy, and couldn't help it if his mother had put him up to it. She could keep her radio and Mom would never hear anything no matter how bad she wanted to if she had to listen to that one's. The boy was all right although Mom never could understand it; but she'd have a fine time over there watching Jenny Farrell's mouth trying to put on hypocrite smiles; and listening to the banty rooster dude who would like as not try to sell her some more insurance.

Anyhow, Tommy was playing a good game; so Thorndyke must be winning. . . . Yes, there it was. the first half was over and Thorndyke was leading 13-6 and oh, what a game this Big Jeff Randolph was playing, the announcer said. Then Mom heard it very plain:

"Yes sir, yes sir, Mrs. Randolph's little boy is certainly showing these Coast players how to play that old football game today."

Mom's hair stood up, almost, and her face got red and she had to sit down.

She had heard her name mentioned on the radio.

All over the country it had gone!

She hoped Jenny Farrell had that turned on so everybody in the neighborhood could hear.

Hardly knowing why, Mom decided she'd bake a chocolate cake which Pete liked so well; it would give her something to do during the second half and they would all be coming home hungry and full of talk anyhow when it was over; and Mom wasn't much interested anyhow since Tommy was winning and everything was all right.

So she mixed up the batter and put it in the oven and began putting the stuff on to warm and while she was at it, mixed up some biscuits; the noise was getting stronger on the radio, the announcer was trying to outshout the crowd; something was happening. Mom wiped the flour from her hands on her apron and put her ear close.

"Oh boy, oh boy, the place is wild. . . . Southern Cal has tied the score and is moving up the field toward the Thorndyke goal. . . . Seven minutes left to play, anything may happen yet. . . . The Trojans are hot, red hot and the Titans are tiring from the heat. . . . They've just taken time out. . . . That Big Jeff Randolph boy is trying to pep them up. . . . Has he played a game today? . . . He's mixed up in everything. . . . He's the whole Thorndyke team. . . . He's stopped the last three plays. . .

"All right, they're lining up now, punt formation, Trojans' ball, fourth down, two to go, on the Thorndyke eighteen-yard line. . . . This is the play. . . ."

Mom strained to hear, her heart pounding, her lips murmuring.

"It's a pass to the right, into the flat, two men are playing the ball—" the noise grew so loud Mom could not hear. A street car bounded down the tracks and nothing but a jumble came out of the machine.

Mom quickly shut it off and ran out to the front door, opened it slightly, careful that nobody saw her. Mrs. Farrell's new radio was roaring:

"down the sidelines, he shakes off a man, two others hit him—oh, how they hit him! — they all go down—and it's over. It's OVER! Big Jeff Randolph has just intercepted a pass and made a sensational run of about ninety yards for a touchdown. . . . That's the game. . . . How they're cheering him. Oh, what a boy! What a football player!"

Mom leaned weakly against the wall, smiling in the darkness.

"Wait a minute. . . . Somebody's hurt. . . . Can't tell who it is. . . . One of the three who went down. . . . They've gathered around him. . . . A doctor is running out. . . ."

Mom knew before they said it. Her lips began to move.

"It's Randolph, Big Jeff Randolph, the star of the game, the greatest all-American of the year. . . . They're bringing out a stretcher from the sidelines. Must be hurt badly. . . . Wait'll I check on this. . . . Hold, please. . . . This may mean the game for Thorndyke because that boy has been Thorndyke today. They're carrying him off now—we'll know in a minute what it is."

Mom was on her knees in the dim doorway.

"Oh, God!" she said fervently, "O, God, in Thy mercy take care of him. He's my wonderful boy, O, God! Don't let it be him. Let it be me, O God! I'm old. He's young. Let it be me, O God! Please let it be me. I'll do anything You say, O God, but save my boy, my little boy."

The voice of the announcer rang through the street.

"There's a report it's his spine. The crowd is still; I'll try to check on that from the hospital. They're taking him to the hospital. I'll try to have it before the game is over. . . . Number 19, is running out to take his place—that's Temple, a good punter but not an offensive man. Well, Big Jeff left them the game. All they have to do is hold it now. They're lining up. Temple is going to try for that extra point."

His spine! A broken neck; a broken back, paralysis.

This was the end of Tommy.

But still Mom prayed: "Make it a mistake, O God . . . You can do it, God. . . . Take me now in his place; let it be me, O God, let it be me!" . . .

She fell in the doorway.

When Mom awoke she was on the couch in the front room downstairs and the place was full of people. Doctor Long was bending over her. Mom couldn't imagine what had happened for a minute. Doctor Long was smiling like he always did when she called him for something that didn't amount to anything. Mom felt foolish with everybody around—even Mrs. Farrell. Then she remembered. She tried to get up but the family doctor firmly held her, still smiling as though it were just a case of colic.

"If you must do things like this worrying about that big son of yours then you just stay here and rest for awhile," he said, being severe as he did with children. "I think the ones she should worry about were those California boys, eh Jim?"

"Sure," Pop said, "whenever they hurt Tom it'll be a fine day. You lay still now, Lizzie, and rest up."

Mom looked around. Mrs. Flannigan, Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Farrell, Cousin Emmie and Steve; Steve and Cousin Emmie had aprons on—they must be getting supper. It must have been a long time since she had fainted. Tommy must be all right; still, they hadn't just said so. Pete came in with a bucket of coal for the fire in the grate.

"Hy, Mom—how's the pepper?" He came over to her side and she took his hand. Mom was kind of weak. Steve came and stood by Pete but didn't say anything, just looked—Steve was one of the kind that did. Mom felt good with them together there. It was a picture—and a promise. If anything happened to her, Pete would be taken care of almost as well as his own mother would do—and Pop, too.

"Is he all right, Pete?" Mom felt that Pete wouldn't fool her. Pete knew it, too. He said: "He'll be all right, Mom—you know Tom. I'll bet he's eating a big meal right now—you know how he can eat."

Mom smiled. She knew Pete wanted her to smile; still, Pete hadn't really said Tom was all right.

"Did the announcer say anything more? Did he check up?"

Mrs. Johnson spoke up quickly. "All he said, Mis' Randolph was there was a report that it wasn't nothin' serious. Now you just be still and don't worry."

"Sure, Mis' Randolph," Mrs. Flannigan said, "you be keerful and be still, like Doctor Long says."

Mrs. Farrell said, real nice: "Now you just got nothin' to take on about, Mis' Randolph—if you'd a heard them cheerin' Tommy and all the nice things they said about him when it was over—I tell you it was just grand. I tell you if it was my Joie they was cheerin' that way I'd be dancin' a jig."

Mom smiled. The poor thing was trying to be nice. It was always that way in time of trouble. Mom said: "Your Joie is a good boy, too, Mis' Farrell."

Out in the kitchen Mom saw Florrie Johnson washing the dishes. She didn't want Florrie in her house but it was always the ones talked about the most that seemed to have the biggest hearts.

The door opened and Uncle Louie came in. Mom could see he had been having a little New Year's cheer. Well, the poor old fellow didn't have much enjoyment out of life. He looked at her.

"Take it easy, Lizzie," he said, "I still don't believe it."

Mom's heart began to beat. She knew they had been keeping something from her. She saw Doctor Long and Pop looking at Uncle Louie and she spoke quickly: "Don't believe what, Uncle Louie?"

"Why there's a report downtown Tom's dead—but I said you—"

Mom felt a cold, clammy hand seize her heart; she shook with a chill. Doctor Long was giving her something to swallow; he was talking: "I tell you it isn't true, Mrs. Randolph; he's been drinking; there are always rumors around. You just depend on what I say."

She felt sinking down. Tommy, with all of his beautiful life before him, just couldn't be gone; it wouldn't be fair, God, it wouldn't be fair. Thy will be done, O Lord. but it wouldn't be fair to take my Tommy!

YOUR HEALTH

By Royal S. Copeland, M. D.
U. S. senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

ALBUMINURIA

ANXIETY AND alarm are often created by the physician's report which states that "you have albumin in the urine". This statement immediately gives rise to the conviction that the sufferer is a victim of that dreaded disease known as Bright's disease. In many instances, the alarm is unwarranted and careful investigation soon reveals that the condition is one of a mild and temporary nature.

Albuminuria, which is the condition in which albumin is found in the urine, can often be traced to some disturbance of the diet; overindulgence in exercise; change of climate or occupation. Of course, it is sometimes the first sign of an infection or irritation of the kidney. Persistent albuminuria is serious and means that some damage has occurred to the kidney.

Under normal conditions, albumin is not present. Occasionally it is found in the individual whose work requires continuous sitting or standing in one position. For this reason this type of albuminuria is spoken of as "orthostatis albuminuria". The albumin quickly disappears when the occupation is changed.

May Be a Family Tendency

The condition is frequently encountered in young men and women who indulge in severe and prolonged athletics. It is also found in those persons who live on an exceptionally high protein diet and eat enormous and intemperate amounts of meat, fish and eggs. Albuminuria is also encountered in certain families showing a tendency towards this affliction. As a rule, it is most commonly found in thin, energetic individuals, rather than in obese persons.

In what I have said I do not mean to imply that albuminuria should be neglected. But its presence does not necessarily mean that you are a victim of Bright's disease. If repeated tests show the presence of albumin, it is advisable that you follow the diet and instructions given you by your physician. I would advise that you avoid strenuous exercise, and lead a quiet and well regulated life.

In addition to diet and exercise, it is essential that the teeth, sinuses and tonsils be examined for possible points of infection.

Avoid cold baths, cold weather, and protect yourself against exposure to dampness. If you "catch cold," take the necessary measures for a prompt cure. Above all, it is essential that you report to your doctor. Periodic health examinations are important.

Rifles From England

During the Civil war the United States bought over 428,000 Enfield rifles from Great Britain. These were models dating from 1858 onward. They were of .577 caliber and used .58 caliber United States cartridges.

TRADE MARK REGISTERED

Bob Gore Apparently Not Going Back to Puerto Rico

WASHINGTON — Apparently Bob Gore, Governor of Puerto Rico, is not going back. Young Teddy Roosevelt, former Governor of the island, has been asked by his cousin in The White House to suggest names of good gubernatorial candidates. Gore has brought his family with him back to the United States, but denied any intention of resigning. He came for medicial attention at John Hopkins, he said, and he would be returning to his post shortly.

The President has given orders to the AAA to rush through a code for whiskey distillers. He wants something accomplished before repeal becomes effective . . . . . In the rush it looks as if the distillers might get away with cutting aged whiskey to the extent of ten quarts for one. The new product would be made of alcohol, water and a little flavoring . . . . Most significant of all it would break down the Agricultural Department's drive for consumers' standards . . . For years, Dr. Harvey Wiley, pure food crusader, preached the effect on health of inadequately aged whiskey . . . Another effect probably will be continued bootlegging. After all what will be the difference between good whiskey cut 10 to 1 and Maryland rye aged a few months in the keg? . . . Just before he sailed for Montevideo, Cordell Hull, mountaineer Secretary of State, got a violent case of stage fright. He went to Roosevelt and asked to be excused from going . . . He said the withdrawal of economic questions from the conference agenda left nothing for him to discuss . . . What he really wanted to avoid was the record of two international failures — London and Montevideo. Roosevelt would not listen.

Harold Ickes, honest Secretary of the Interior, is a gladiolus expert. At his Winetka home he cultivates some of the best varieties in Illinois . . . In Washington he has not had time even to raise zinnias . . . Usually he does not get home until eight o'clock . . . The Treasury is suspicious of the number of marks issued by Germany. Officials are wondering whether the new Hitler Government has issued more marks than set by the amount of gold in the German treasury. As a result, the Secret Service is scanning German currency to see if there are any German notes bearing serial numbers not officially listed. This would be a dead give-away.

The State Department is not anxious to favor French wines when the liquor embargo finally is lifted . . . French default on the War Debt plus French quotas against American goods will throw all vintage preferences to Argentine and Chile.

Tariffs to Go Up

The boosting of tariff rates under the NRA and AAA is imminent . . . This is provided for under the Recovery Acts and is to compensate for the processing tax, higher wages, and other increased costs of production . . . The devaluation of the dollar also makes the step more immediate . . . The man who is rushing the whiskey code through the AAA for Roosevelt is Clarence Willingdon, son of a Methodist preacher. . . . Maxim Litvinov lost a lot of friends his unofficial predecessors had made by the secretive manner in which he conducted his White House negotiations . . . The Russian Commissar of Foreign Relations has a complex about secrecy and never is so happy as when he is creating an air of mystery about even such commonplaces as brushing his teeth.

The pretzel industry is up in arms. The AAA has classified it as a mere branch of the baking industry, whereas pretzelers claim that pretzel bending is a distinct and separate profession. . . . Any baker can bake bread, they said, but the manner of bending a pretzel reguires real artistry. So they demand a separate code.

Louey Howe was the secret author of the White House statement striking economic questions out of the agenda of the Pan-American Conference. When it came over to the State Department,the diplomates were up in arms . . . So also were Latin Americans. They had spent two years drafting the agenda with the concurrence of the United States, and with one stroke Louey Howe ripped it to pieces . . . .

The split in the Roosevelt family regarding gold-buying still continues . . . His conservative Treasury advisers are centering their attack on depreciation in the value of government bonds . . . They emphasize that the banks of the country are loaded with Government bonds. So are the insurance companies . . . .If these bonds drop materially they tell Roosevelt there may be another run on the banks.

AT THE GRAND

Superstition is apparently a thing of the past with the cast members of "Footlight Parade," the Warner Bros. musical picture now at the Grand theatre. This applies equally to everyone from Jimmy Cagney and Joan Blondell to the members of the chorus. A live black cat required in several scenes, and once regarded as an omen of ill-luck, wandered around the big stage, when not actually working in scenes, without causing the slightest nervousness to anyone present.

AT THE CLIFTONA

The secret is out: Maurice Chevalier sings in his morning bath . . . sometimes. And when he does, Hollywood song-writers are happy. Leo Robin and Ralph Rainger tell why. They have composed twenty-odd songs for Chevalier, including the tunes for his latest Paramount picture, "The Way to Love," which comes to the Cliftona Theatre, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

When Rainger has completed the music to a song and Robin has written the lyrics, Chevalier is invited to their office to hear the interpretation—with Rainger playing and Robin singing.

They play the song several times for Chevalier who goes on his way without comment.

But, if Chevalier arises the next morning with the song in his heart and on his lips—it's "sold." If he's not in the singing mood while performing his morning ablutions, the song isn't what he wants.

By this invariable method the star has selected such song hits as "Louise," "Mimi," "My Ideal," "Park in Paree," "Look What I've Got," "One Hour With You," and a score of others.

Ann Dvorak plays the leading feminine role with Edward Everett Horton contributing the comedy in "The Way to Love." Norman Taurog directed.

In his latest picture, "The Way to Love," a Paramount picture, Maurice Chevalier makes love to the dainty Ann Dvorak, at the Cliftona Theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Just Before the Shooting Started

By IRVIN S. COBB

JUST before hostilities ended in 1918, a young lieutenant of my acquaintance was detailed to duty as a drill officer at camp of colored draft troops in Mississippi. When he got back home after the armistice he told this story:

He said that late one night he was returning from a nearby town to his quarters. As he neared the sentry lines, out of the darkness came a voice calling "Halt!"

He halted, gave the countersign and started on. Immediately, in the gloom, there was a rattle as of a rifle being shifted in the sentry's hands and again the same voice cried: "Halt!"

"You've halted me once already," he said sharply, rightly figuring that the unseen one must be a green trooper, "and I've given you the password. What more do you want?"

"But, boss," said the sentry, drawing nearer, "I don't know you."

"Very probable," said the captain. "What has that got to do with it?"

"It's got a whole heap to do with it. W'en de Sergeant put me yere tonight he p'intedly sez to me dat if somebody comes by which is a stranger to me I is to cry 'Halt!' th'ee times and den shoot 'im."

Interest, Capacity, Opportunity

From "How to Study"—A Guidance Handbook.

Every high school student has a dsire to be, and do something worth while. The only difficulty you have with this desire is, is it worth the price? We soon learn that hard work is necessary to succeed in high school. We also learn that there is much of the responsibility of what we do unloaded upon us.

We may have the ability and intelligence to be a leader in our classes but our work shows only average or even below average. The teachers and students rank us by what we do and not by what we could do. After we have made our places in the school, it is more difficult to win a higher place than a lower one. When you see the situation as it is, and desire to win a higher place, tell no one about it. When you do tell some one about your ambitions half the battle is lost. Let others see for themselves what you are doing and they will tell you.

You should get acquainted with the meanings of three words in order to do what is suggested here. The words are capacity, interest and opportunity. You possibly can recall from your past experiences at least one time when you did a long and hard day's work; or you may have walked a long distance. This tested your capacity as far as your physical strength is concerned. Your mental capacity is rarely tested in this way, since most people will not work up to their capacity.

Chillicothe Girl Reserves Are Guests of Local Club

MRS. WILLIAM ULM ADDRESSES GROUP, ON GIRL RESERVES CODE

One of the big social events of the school year at C. H. S. was the joint Girl Reserves meeting held Thursday evening at the Methodist church. At this meeting the Chillicothe group was the guests of the Circleville club. Seventy were present.

A feature of the evening was the address of Mrs. William Ulm one of the local advisers. Mrs. Ulm used as her subject the Girl Reserves code, Dependability and Sincerity.

The welcome address was given by the president, Mary Ellen Kirkpatrick. There followed the evening's program: A piano solo, by Virginia Caskey, a vocal solo, by Miss Johnda Tootle poem by Lydia Given, vocal solo by Elizabeth Dowden, violin solo by Vera Zaenglein; and Mrs. Ulm's address.

Refreshments consisted of fruit salad, sandwiches, and cocoa.

The visiting president invited the Circleville Girl Reserves to Chillicothe in January. A definite date will be set later.

At the close all joined hands in a friendship circle singing the Girl Reserves song, "Follow the Gleam," after which Bernice Liston sounded taps on the trumpet.

The Athletic and Nature group of the Junior Girl Reserves had their first hike today. Their destination was Dewey Park. The hike was under the supervision of Miss Hitler.

Mary Hall is president of this group, and Jessie Dresbach is secretary; while the officers of the International group are Katherine Moore and Jane Littleton.

The latter group will have their first meeting on November 27 at the home of Matilda Davis.

A Tale of Two Jugs

(With Apologies to Floyd Dunlap)

Pete Moseby was one tough guy. The reason was he lived in a tough country—the hills of Kentucky.

Pete was in the undertaking business and the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages, and did a little horse trading on the side. All three businesses went hand in hand as you will see. In fact some of his best customers in the alcholic business dealt with him in the undertaking business; and in several instances a few customers who had traded horses with him also had further dealing with Pete. So you see Pete never lost their business, coming or going.

It was one hot day in "Juggersville." In fact it was one of those days that dried you up and blew you away. Pete always attended to his business personally because he always said that "too many cooks would spoil the broth."

Pete was head over heels in work. He had to deliver ten gallons of whiskey, a team of horses, and the corpse of old "Red Eye" Jones to Whiskey Switch. It was going to cost him plenty to make three trips so he decided to load them all on together. "Red Eye" went on first, then the jugs, and then Pete got in and they started off.

On his way he kept patting himself on the back as he thought of the little job he was "putting over" on the prohibition agents.

At the forks Pete decided to take the high road, because the agents did not often frequent this road. At the top Pete was ordered to stop and be searched. Just then Pete started down the hill with the agents prusuing him.

As he rode along he recalled that "Red Eye" had a craving for speed. Well, he was surely going to get plenty of speed now.

They were fast approaching "Dead Man's Curve," and when they hit the curve the horses went one way, "Red Eye" the other, and the agents still a third. Pete was undecided, so he went with "Red Eye" over the cliff.

After the dust had settled, Pete was in jail, the horses in the glue factory, the prohibition agents in the hospital and "Red Eye" was under the sod.

Oh, yes, the jugs! Well, they landed in the river, and although the contents were somewhat weakened by river water, they seemed to satisfy the chief of legal activities of "Whiskey Switch."

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

MOST everybody is going to Europe or coming back now. Some of the ones that go for the first time have a hard time finding their way around the boat. There was a lady on one of the big ships that went to a steward and says, "Say, I don't know where my room is, and I left my key in my room."

"Do you know what deck you're on, lady?"

"No, I don't remember that either. I went to sleep last night, and then forgot all about it. But say, I remember now. My window was right opposite a big stone lighthouse. You ought to know where that room is, steward."

stitutions to look after it would be the proper thing for the next congressman to be from Chillicothe. Ross is also the largest county in the district.

McKENZIE, TOO

But Mr. Day's candidacy is not the final word from Ross-co. It is reported that Judge Wilbur McKenzie of common pleas court is aspiring to the job. It is entirely possible, however, that Judge McKenzie, one of Ross-co's most popular men, will not run this time but will wait two years.

If Judge McKenzie does not come out for the office you can bet your boots Mr. Underwood will again be a candidate. Underwood looks with much favor upon Judge McKenzie, who, incidentally, is not the man Garrett Claypool, district committeeman, would have run for the office.

Mr. Underwood, who has been here a couple of times in recent months in regard to postmastership and Robert L. Immell of Yellowbud, has intimated that he will be a candidate if Judge McKenzie is not, but if Judge McKenzie does run that he will not enter the fight.

Many things may happen between now and the August, 1934, primary, when governors, congressmen, senators and county officials will be selected by their parties.

FIFTIETH YEAR. NUMBER 272 — CIRCLEVILLE, OHIO, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1933 — THREE

Did you Know

By Pat J. Kirwin

THAT the first discovery of the remains of ancient inhabitants in Circleville was made on Aug. 20, 1822. The Olive Branch of the time offers the following account:

"While some mechanics were digging near the corner of the square fort, they came to a strata of earth differing in quality and color from that which composed the wall generally, in which reposed the skeletons of several human beings which had probably been mouldering for centuries. Although it is known that Circleville was many centuries ago inhabited by a tribe of so-called mound builders, this is the first positive evidence. The discovery of the skeletons was made about 10 feet from the summit of the wall of the fort. The bones extended nine or 10 feet from head to foot.

That the following "cow story" was recounted in an issue of The Olive Branch of 1824: "A farmer in this county had a cow that died immediately after bringing forth a living calf. The body of the cow was opened through motives of curiosity, where incredible to relate, 59 completely formed calves were found, varying in size. The one before mentioned made 60. Ohio and Pickaway-co against the world!"

That Wesley Work, a Pickaway-twp farmer, in 1870, was the hero in the fight against the dreadful mad itch, a disease which formerly attacked cattle in the fall of the year. This disease was well known in the 1860's and 1870's. In the fall of 1870, the disease had begun and was spreading throughout Pickaway-co. Many valuable cattle were dying from the ravages of mad itch. According to The Herald of the time, one evening while going home in his horse and buggy, Mr. Work improvised a remedy which cured and later helped exterminate the disease. His remedy was a mixture of whiskey and milk applied to the animal every 24 hours.

THAT outspoken notices were published in the newspapers of 100 years ago. In those days, borrowing, instead of hiring horses appeared to be in vogue. Mr. James Bell, Circleville, seemed to be afflicted in this way, so he published the following notice:

"In order to prevent importunity, I am induced to give public notice that henceforth I will not lend my horse to any person . . . so please don't bother me about it."

Petty thievery was apparently being practiced at this time, as we find the following notice in the same issue:

"Mr. ——

YOU STOLE MY SHINGLES . . . and I can prove it. I'll give you 10 days to come forward with the goods or look out for the consequences."

That morning baths in the Scioto river were quite popular during the summer heat of 1870. Commenting on this, The Herald of July 29, 1870, had the following to say: "A citizen of our city 'went in' the other morning and the residents along the river further down now complain of the muddy appearance of the water."

That the saloons of 60 years ago apparently handled other things beside the "spirituous liquors." The Democrat and Watchman of November, 1872, has the following comment about business:

"The saloons of the city, some 18 of them, appear to be doing a thriving business. A majority of them are crowded with parties of ladies and gentlemen every evening in quest of ICE CREAM, CAKE, LEMONADE and bon vivants."

That due to an extreme heat wave, there was a scarcity of ice in Circleville during the summer of 1870. It was almost impossible to buy even a few pounds. The heat was so extreme, newspapers of the time report, that a load of ice being brought from Columbus would melt before it reached this city.

Political Non - Aggression is Bargain; Japan Worry is Ended

Americans in Russia Pleased With Act

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.— A virtual pact of political non-aggression in return for complete capitulation by the Soviets on practically everything desired by the United States was the bargain on which President Roosevelt and Maxim Litvinoff, the Soviet foreign commissar, based their agreement for resumption of normal relations between the two nations.

This was learned today as the United States and the Soviet Union enjoyed the first day of offical relations since establishment of the Soviet regime 16 years ago.

Although the series of understandings on which resumption of normal relations was based did not mention a non-agression pact, one of these understandings contained the same wording incorporated in the basis of the political non-agression pacts which the Soviets have with several European nations.

LITVINOFF REQUEST

Furthermore, it was learned Litvinoff requested this particular understanding in return for the concessions granted by the Soviets.

Although worded in a roundabout way, the understanding provides in effect that neither nation will engage in or permit military activities within their own territories aimed at armed struggle with one another.

MOSCOW, Nov. 18.—Russia today hailed American recognition as a triumphant achievement for the Soviet regime and as a substantial contribution to the cause of world peace.

While official comment still was awaited, Russians of all walks of life—peasants, workers, engineers, and government officials—expressed great enthusiasm over the formal recognition of communist Russia by the world's greatest capitalist nation.

Japan was frequently mentioned in every discussion of the event, the general impression being that Russia has far less to fear in the for east now that the United States "is on her side."

LIQUOR PLAN IDEAS DIFFER

Hope For Early Decision In Legislature Wanes; Meets On December 6.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 18.—While a Senate committee was engaged in drafting a bill embodying recommendations of the governor's advisory liquor commission here today, hope that a state liquor control program could be speedily enacted when the legislature meets in special session on Dec. 6 began to wane.

Reactions of members of the legislature and other persons who have actively interested themselves in liquor control legislation indicated that while the advisory commission's plan has the hearty endorsement of many it is condemned as unsatisfactory by many others.

It appeared almost certain that not only the bill containing the advisory commission's recommendations but several others as well will be introduced at the special session.

Gov. George White, absent from the capital, has not announced whether his advisors' plans meet with his entire approval. The plan called for a state liquor monopoly under a commission of three, with sale of liquor by the glass permitted only in licensed hotels, restaurants and clubs when meals are served.

A number of legislators objected to the state government entering the liquor business. One of these was Sen. Carl D. Sheppard, D. Akron. Another was Sen. Joseph N. Ackerman, R. Cleveland, former chairman of the Senate liquor committee.

The liquor report also drew fire from groups opposed to selling liquor by the glass under any circumstances. In this category was the Ohio Anti-Saloon league.

ELECTION COST REPORTED LOW

Candidates File Expenses; Democratic Group Has 50 Cent Balance.

Candidates for office in this city had very little expense according to reports filed with Harry E. Weill, clerk of the board of elections. Friday at 6:30 p. m. was the deadline for filing.

Carl C. Leist, chairman of a Circleville Democratic Candidates' organization, filed a report that he received $59 in contributions from the various candidates and that $58.50 was expended leaving 50 cents in the "treasury." C. C. Chapelear, chairman of the G.O.P. executive committee, filed a report that the Republican party spent nary a cent in the city campaign and received nary a cent to spend.

A number of candidates listed no expense whatsoever. They included John C. Goeller, unopposed for president of council; Julius Helwagen, second ward councilman; Harry Lane, township clerk; Lawrence E. Goeller, member of board of education; W. B. Lake and J. W. Greeno, township trustees; Mrs. Lillian W. Moore, member of board of education; Clark Will, defeated third ward councilman; Oscar Wocher, constable, and several others in minor offices.

FREE-FOR-ALL CONTEST SEEN FOR CONGRESS

Underwood's Seat to Be Fought for By Number of District Democrats

SPANGLER, DAY IN

Underwood-or - McKenzie But Not Both

It is quite a while until the next election but the political bee appears to be buzzing in the bonnets of a number of persons in the Eleventh Ohio district with Mell G. Underwood's seat in Congress as the principal objective.

The district comprises Pickaway, Ross, Fairfield, Hocking and Perry counties, and just about every one of the counties is expected to have a candidate in the race. Nothing has been heard from Hocking-co and nothing from Perry-co where Mr. Underwood resides, but each of the others is certain to place a candidate against the veteran congressman.

Pickaway, according to his own statements, will have William I. Spangler, former state senator from Tarlton, in the scuffle. He's an avowed candidate. Mr. Spangler intended to be a candidate for the county board of education this fall then run for Congress next year but, after filing his petition for the county board, he decided the 'dirt' stirred up in that fight would injure his chances for the Democratic nomination for Congress. Accordingly, he withdrew from the board race, and wisely, too.

HEAR CUNNINGHAM

The name of Russell Cunningham, former prosecuting attorney and American Legion leader, has been pushed to the front in Lancaster, and several other names have been rumored, not near so strongly as has Mr. Cunningham's, however.

Then we turn to Ross-co and find much activity. Louis M. Day, attorney, became an avowed candidate for the office during the present week and in a statement to a Chillicothe newspaper said he felt he was "as well equipped as any other citizen in the Eleventh Ohio district for the position, and he felt that he could give the constituency as good if not better service than had been given by Mr. Underwood or any of his predecessors going a long way back."

Mr. Day said that he felt that since Ross-co has two federal in-

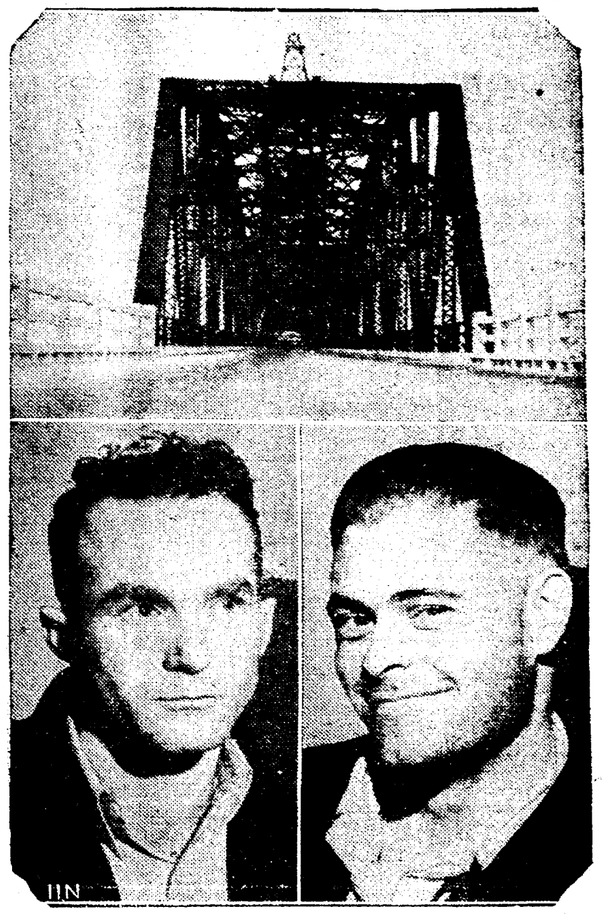
Face Death in Hart Kidnaping



California's severe anti-kidnaping law will be invoked in the cases of Thomas H. Thurmond, left above, and J. M. "Jack" Holmes, right, who, according to police have confessed to the kidnaping and slaying of Brooke F. Hart, 22-year-old son of a San Jose, Cal., merchant. Captured while placing a phone call demanding ransom Thurmond and Holmes are said to have told police they slugged young Hart and dumped his body into San Francisco bay from the bridge shown in the photo above.

Hart Body Still Eludes Hunters

State Seeks All Corroborating Testimony in Case Against Brutal Murderers of Scion; 'Mystery Woman' Reported Sought By Police.

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 18.—"There must be no slipup in the case against the confessed murders and kidnapers of Brooke Hart."

With this declaration, District Attorney Fred Thomas of Santa Clara-co issued orders today to police to obtain statements from every person with tangible knowledge of the brutal slaying.

"We have the signed confessions of Jack Holmes and Thomas Thurmond that they bound their victim with baling wire and shot several times at him after throwing him from the San Mateo bridge into lower San Francisco bay," District Attorney Thomas said.

"But we must have corroborating testimony. We must have an airtight case. There must be no slipup."

Then with deliberate conviction in his voice, Thomas pounded his fist on his desk and declared:

"These men deserve hanging and that's what they'll get."

STILL HUNT BODY

While the wheels of legal justice were grinding toward swift justice and a speedy trial, preliminary hearing of which probably will be next week, under California's new kidnap statute making abduction where bodily herm is done a death penalty, the grim search of lower San Francisco bay continued for the body of Hart.

Carrying out Thomas' orders police obtained statements from two Oakland wood gatherers, Vin-

A great philosopher was looking for a word that to his mind would express the highest in human life. It came to him in the word—"I Ought." Life imposes upon us all some obligation. The measure in which we meet our obligation determines our character for time and eternity. We dare not be shirkers. Every evasion of a responsibility brings upon us a punishment. It is self-inflicted. The church emphasises life's imperatives. It finds its message in the words of the Bible. It places God upon the throne. It makes the example of Jesus the final arbiter. Go to church tomorrow. Take a friend.

We have no creed but Christ and use no name but His. "He is the head over all things to His church, the pillar and ground of the truth." In this day when people are following dictators it is well to read again the inspired word which says "There is none other name under heaven that is given among men whereby ye must be saved" and Jesus said, as he left the earth after his resurrection from the dead, "All authority is given unto men in heaven and on earth."

It might be surprising to know that the minister, R. Tibbs Maxey, came to Circleville a little over two years ago and began with no members and now there are 61 enrolled.

The Church Invites You

MAN'S NEED OF THE CHURCH

Dr. Charles E. Jefferson has said, "No man is in his place as long as he is out of the church. To say that a man can be as good outside as inside the church is absurd. As well one might say that a man who continuously neglects his civic duties is as good a citizen as the man who performs them. Man is a home-making animal and he mars his life if he is not loyal to the home. He is a political animal and he curtails his life if he is not faithful to the state. He is a religious animal and if he holds aloof from the church he starves and stunts the highest instincts of his nature." Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

For thirty-five years, the Church of the Nazarene has carried forward an ever-growing foreign missions plan and program, the Rev. Pusey, declared in announcing the Fourth Silver Jubilee anniversary celebration for tomorrow.

First missionary work dates back to 1898, ten years before the general assembly at Pilot Point, Texas, at which the merger of the Holiness Church of Christ, the Pentecostal Churches of America with the Nazarene church was ratified. It is this union that the church now is celebrating as its twenty-fifth birthday anniversary.

FIRST UNITED BRETHREN CHURCH
T. C. Harper, Minister

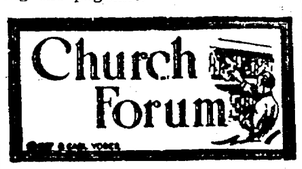
Sunday is Home Coming and Reunion Day for the Circleville church. Invitations have been mailed to former members and friends Sunday school classes have put forth special efforts to secure a large attendance.

The Sunday school hour is 9:15.

Rev. Harper will have a special message suitable for the occasion at the 10:30 hour for worship. The Junior Christian Endeavors under the supervision of Mary Elizabeth Groce will meet during the Church Hour.

The Young People will assemble at six o'clock in the evening for Christian Endeavor with John Porter as leader.

At 7:00 o'clock the Otterbein Guild girls will present a pageant entitled, "The Challenge of the Cross." Miss Jessie Cummins is Guild President and Mrs. Nan Kirkpatrick Patroness and directing the pageant.



There is a difference in age-groups. Young adolescents are likely to respond more quickly than adults. In fact in adult classes some may be timid and easily embarrassed by direct questions if such questions seem to expose their ignorance; but a boy or girl is not so easily embarassed. In the case of youth they can be more direct. Some times it is wise to have questions written on a blackboard or distributed beforehand to allow time for thought. Where lesson study is pursued by the pupils, questions serve well as a means of testing such study.

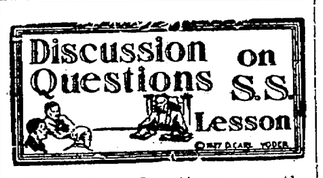
The hardest work some people do is trying to avoid work.



Discussion Questions on the Sunday school lesson, Paul in Athens, Acts 17:16-34 for Sunday, Nov. 19.

1. How can we train ourselves to meet objections to Christianity?
2. What are the chief hindrances to worship?
3. How may these hindrances be overcome?
4. What happens to us when we find God and are conscious of his presence?
5. What is God like?
6. What are some of the good points as learned from this lesson in the introduction to a sermon or any speech?
7. How judge the results of a sermon?

Gladstone says, "I hold more strongly than ever to this conviction deepened and strengthened by long experience of the reality, the nearness and the personality of God."

Lesson Prayer, "We would know thee as our Father and every man as our brother; we would worship thee truly and ever live in Thy presence; that all these things may be realized we pray for the guidance of the Holy Spirit."

PAUL IN ATHENS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 17:16-34.

GOLDEN TEXT—For in him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said, For we are also his offspring. Acts 17:28.

PRIMARY TOPIC — Worshiping God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Preaching in a Famous City.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why Do We Worship?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Seeking and Finding God.

I. Athens Full of Idols (v. 16).

Athens was the intellectual metropolis of the world at that time, the home of the world's greatest eloquence and philosophy. In spite of this fact the city was given wholly to idolatry, which so stirred Paul's spirit that he was there moved to preach the gospel. He knew that despite wealth and learning the Athenians needed the gospel as much as did also the poor and the ignorant.

II. The Parties Concerned in the Controversy (vv. 17-21).

1. The Jews (v. 17). True to his usual custom, Paul went into the synagogue and entered into earnest argument with the Jews.

2. The devout persons (v. 17). This doubtless included proselytes to the Jewish faith.

3. The philosophers (v. 18). From the Jews and devout persons he turned to such as were found in the market place. Here he came into touch with Epicurean and Stoic philosophers. When these philosophers heard his preaching they desired to know what new doctrine he preached, so they invited him to Areopagus where he might speak to them. They inquired as to what this "babbler" might say. The word "babbler" means literally "seed-picker." They conceived Paul as a globe trotter who had gathered up seeds of truth or error here and there over the world and that he was somewhat like themselves, interested in talking about that which he had seen and heard.

III. Paul's Address on Mars' Hill (vv. 22-31).

1. The introduction (vv. 22, 23). He introduced his discourse in a courteous manner, stating that he perceived that they were very religious. He did not accuse them of superstition as the A. V. would have it, but as the A. R. V., "very religious." He declared that as he was viewing their city he beheld an altar with an inscription, "To the unknown God." He proceeded at once to connect it with the idea of the true God, implying that their altar had been erected to him.

2. The body of his discourse (vv. 24-31).

a. A declaration concerning God (vv. 24, 25).

(1) The true God created the material universe (v. 24). This was a direct blow at the philosophy of both the Epicureans and the Stoics.

(2) God's spirituality and immensity (vv. 24, 25). Being essentially spiritual he demands heart-service, and being transcendent above all he is not confined to earthly temples.

(3) His active providence (v. 25). He gives existence to all things. He bestows needed gifts upon all creatures, and as sovereign directs all things.

b. His declarations concerning man (vv. 26-31).

(1) His common origin (v. 26). This was a blow at the foolish Athenian pride which supposed that they were superior to all other people. This proposition he proved from their own literature (v. 28). He argued that if men are the offspring of God and bear his likeness, it is utter folly to make images such as the senseless idols were.

(2) Nations have their place by the sovereign purpose of God (v. 26). He argued that the position and mission of each nation is of God's appointment.

(3) Men should seek God (v. 27). His goodness and grace in supplying all human needs, and his sovereign ordering of the affairs of nations should move men to see and seek God.

(4) Pressing obligations to repent (vv. 30, 31). This was his supreme message. Though God had formerly passed over the idolatrous practice of the nations, he now calls all men to repent in preparation for the coming day of judgment, the guarantee of which is the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead.

IV. The Results of Paul's Preaching (vv. 32-34).

1. Some mocked (v. 32). Men and women are today mocking the preacher who dares to preach the coming judgment.

2. Some procrastinated (v. 32). This is the common way of men. Many of them do not mock, but they hesitate to accept and act upon the urgency of the message.

3. Some believed (v. 34). Wherever the gospel is preached there are some who believe and are saved

CHRISTIANITY'S APPEAL TO YOUTH

Christianity has a particular appeal to youth in its call to chivalry, to courage to adventure. Its essence is the personality of Jesus, a young man Himself, rather than the dogmatic creeds and doctrines of other religions.

A great many youthful Christian leaders have caught the inspiration of Christ's personality and have accomplished wonders. John Wesley founded the Holy Club at Oxford at the age of 26. Martin Luther climbed the Santa Scala at Rome at 27. Jeremy Taylor was holding men spellbound at St. Paul's, London, at 18. Dwight L. Moody was doing evangelistic work at 23. Charles H. Spurgeon was preaching at the great London tabernacle at 20. Francis E. Clark founded the Christian Endeavor at 29. George Williams founded the Young Men's Christian Association at 23. David Livingstone was doing a marvelous piece of missionary work in the heart of Africa at 23.

C. E. Adams in his book, "What I Owe to Christ" has said: "More than any other figure in human history Jesus represents for all time the youth of man confronting undismayed obstacles inconceivably great and conquering them by the daring of His Spirit."

Favor Princeton To Defeat Navy

By DAVIS J. WALSH

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 18.—Princeton, the only team in the country that has neither been beaten nor tied nor scored upon nor in any way sullied by allien hands, will take its immaculate record out there in the light of day again this afternoon, this time for a little marksmanship on the part of the United States Naval academy. There have been times when the United States Naval academy proved to be a marksman that bulls-eyed everything but this isn't one of them.

Beaten badly by Pittsburgh and convincingly by Columbia, the Navy hasn't a great deal, except the traditional Navy fight. It is a little light in man-power and a little short of punch. Moreover, the word is that Gordan Chung-Hoon, one of the best of its ball-runners, is insufficiently recovered from a recent injury and might not be right for this game. If he isn't Navy's chances of working an overnight miracle will be fewer and these were all too few, as it was.

BEAT NOTRE DAME

The middies did beat Notre Dame but, after all, this seems to provide neither distinction nor novelty. In fact, if you don't beat Notre Dame nowadays, you go to the nearest window and let the air have plenty of weight.

As for Princeton, it has been both good and fortunate this season in running up a total of 151 to 0 against a combined opposition provided by Amherst, Williams, Columbia, W. & L., Brown and Dartmouth.

It was fortunate against W. & L., a team of no great pretentions but which nevertheless held the Tiger to one touchdown and itself crossed the goal line, only to be recalled by a penalty. But Princeton was good, very good, against Columbia and Brown, two major opponents, and so the cast, badly needing a little moral sustenance, is looking to the Tiger to retrieve some degree of self-respect from the tatters of its impaired prestige.

The Tiger is a very good retriever. It is a team of opportunists, similar to the 1933 "destiny men," and, as such, seemingly capable of topping any bid the Navy may care to make. In addition, if the first line of retrievers does not give complete satisfaction, there is a second and even a third line, the whole apparently constituting a plurality as far as the Navy is concerned.

Furthermore there is a young man in the backfield by the name of Le Van who, they aver, has everything. If he has, all I've got to say is that this is a very great deal.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

Cincinnati baseball fans are already greeting Larry MacPhail, their new president-to-be, for his trading ability * * * They regret the loss of Red Lucas, a pitcher of parts, but they also greet the addition of Tony Piet and Adam Comorosky from Pittsburgh and Glenn Spencer from New York * * MacPhail had to give up two other members of the team George Grantham and Wolly Roettger * * * * *

Pittsburghers incidentally are doubtful of the value of the Piet-Comorosky for Lucas-Roettger swap as far as they are concerned * * *

It looked today as though Foster Bales, local athlete, would not appear in Princeton's lineup against the Navy, because of his shoulder injuries * * * This injury, a painful one no doubt, has kept the youth who was expected to be a star performer with this year's great team from performing in the last several games. Fans here are pulling for Princeton to go through the season undefeated and to get the Rose Bowl bid * * * Bales is certain to be ready to go at that time and more power to the halfback whom Coach Fritz Crisler calls "the fightingest man on the squad."

Columbus high school football reaches its climax today with West and East meet at Ohio stadium for the city championship * * * East hold a light edge and should win * * * Coach Harley Pearce's South hi outfit whipped Central 26-7, Friday.

NEED CLOTHING

Besides the money to be paid in wages, Henderson has asked the C. W. A. headquarters in Washington for an appropriation of $753,000 to be spent in Ohio for the purchase of work clothes for the re-employed men.

Many of them, he said, have seen their own funds so depleted during their long idleness that they would be unable to work in severe weather in such clothing as they now possess.

For them the C. W. A. will provide warm clothing and shoes, practically all of which will be bought from merchants in the districts where the workers reside if they are able to supply goods in sufficient quantities and at a reasonable price, Henderson announced.

C. W. A. headquarters has been deluged with local projects for the employment of men under the new program.

All C. W. A. jobs must be largely labor projects. The workers will be paid out of federal funds, but the government will not assume the cost of materials, other than allowed under the regular program of the Public Works Administration.

Further stimulus to the gigantic re-employment drive was added by the state highway department which announced it would advance $500,000 monthly for C. W. A. highway projects, expecting to be repaid later by the government.

Growing up With Books"

ALL over the United States, the present week is known as "BOOK WEEK." This is the fifteenth year in which this festival has been observed in libraries, schools, and book shops all over the country.

"Growing up with books" is the central theme chosen for the 1933 week, its selection pointing out the fact that the children of today are growing up in a world where they seem destined to have more leisure hours than any previous generation has known.

Committees on the use of leisure time have been organized in many cities, but; without being organized and directed, the great majority of men and women, boys and girl, are using all extra time they may have to follow their own chosen pastimes and recreations. Reading has always been the most universal occupation of leisure, and surprising as it has been to those who have expected the movies, radio, and other distractions, to lessen the number of readers, the contrary has been true and libraries have experienced a constantly increasing demand for books and information.

Parents and teachers, looking ahead to the "new era" want to see that all children acquire the reading habit, and have wide and easy access to books. Circleville, from its earliest days, recognized the need for good reading, and the Circleville Public Library, for more than sixty years, has made every week a "Book Week" in the community. While no elaborate plans have been made to celebrate the designated week, the library is in the midst of a busy period of preparing new juvenile books for circulation, assisting teachers in making out "Reading lists," enrolling new borrowers and meeting the "after school" rush.

Join the Red Cross

THE RED CROSS is beginning its annual roll call. It invites the American people to come to its support by pledging or renewing their membership at the nominal fee of one dollar.

There is in the United States no organization more deserving of popular approval and support than the Red Cross. None, we believe, will dispute this. Its field of active service is as wide as human suffering. In the midst of war and disease, pestilence and hunger it is found pursuing courageously and efficiently its task of ministering to the needs of those requiring help.

New duties were found by the Red Cross in connection with the depression. Assistance, in the way of food and clothing, was given by it to more than 25,000,000 persons in the last 18 months. This it did without neglecting in any way its regular duties. More than 117 communities in which disaster in some major form had struck felt its hand or relief. Its numberous other duties were performed with an unmatched devotion to its ideal of service.

The Red Cross has a large membership in Circleville and Pickaway-co. It hopes that all present members will renew their membership and that new ones will come into the organization from this state.

No call is too great or too far away for the Red Cross to answer. It stands ready at all hours of the day and night to respond. When disaster strikes in the way of floods, earthquakes or other form, its representatives are hoongmet etao g?FBinmloo among the first on the scene.

It has a record of service probably unmatched by that of any organization. Quick and efficient service is given, which makes its work of double value.

The American people owe a great debt to the Red Cross. To show their appreciation of what it has done and is doing is a duty resting upon them. They have an opportunity to do this at a financial cost which few can not afford.

SYNOPSIS

After three brilliant seasons as a varsity back for Thorndyke, "Big Jeff" Randolph is about to close his collegiate football career in the annual Tournament of Roses game on New Year's Day. Back home in tiny Athens, mid-west factory town, "Jeff's" adoring Mom is listening to the game on the radio. To her the giant "Jeff" is still her little Tommy of yesteryears who first starred at "the football" in high school so well that he was lured east to the wealthy and historic Thorndyke institution. Pop and Uncle Louie have gone downtown to hear the returns. One of the neighbor's children invites Mom to listen on his big set but she declines the invitation. . . .

CHAPTER THIRTY-SIX

He ran back across the street, flying. Joie was a nice boy, and couldn't help it if his mother had put him up to it. She could keep her radio and Mom would never hear anything no matter how bad she wanted to if she had to listen to that one's. The boy was all right although Mom never could understand it; but she'd have a fine time over there watching Jenny Farrell's mouth trying to put on hypocrite smiles; and listening to the banty rooster dude who would like as not try to sell her some more insurance.

Anyhow, Tommy was playing a good game; so Thorndyke must be winning. . . . Yes, there it was. The first half was over and Thorndyke was leading 13-6 and oh, what a game this Big Jeff Randolph was playing, the announcer said. Then Mom heard it very plain:

"Yes sir, yes sir, Mrs. Randolph's little boy is certainly showing these Coast players how to play that old football game today."

Mom's hair stood up, almost, and her face got red and she had to sit down.

She had heard her name mentioned on the radio.

All over the country it had gone!

She hoped Jenny Farrell had that turned on so everybody in the neighborhood could hear.

Hardly knowing why, Mom decided she'd bake a chocolate cake which Pete liked so well; it would give her something to do during the second half and they would all be coming home hungry and full of talk anyhow when it was over; and Mom wasn't much interested anyhow since Tommy was winning and everything was all right.

So she mixed up the batter and put it in the oven and began putting the stuff on to warm and while she was at it, mixed up some biscuits; the noise was getting stronger on the radio, the announcer was trying to outshout the crowd; something was happening. Mom wiped the flour from her hands on her apron and put her ear close.

"Oh boy, oh boy, the place is wild. . . . Southern Cal has tied the score and is moving up the field toward the Thorndyke goal. . . . Seven minutes left to play, anything may happen yet. . . . The Trojans are hot, red hot and the Titans are tiring from the heat. . . . They've just taken time out. . . . That Big Jeff Randolph boy is trying to pep them up. . . . Has he played a game today? . . . He's mixed up in everything. . . . He's the whole Thorndyke team. . . . He's stopped the last three plays. . .

"All right, they're lining up now, punt formation, Trojans' ball, fourth down, two to go, on the Thorndyke eighteen-yard line. . . . This is the play. . . ."

Mom strained to hear, her heart pounding, her lips murmuring.

"It's a pass to the right, into the flat, two men are playing the ball—" the noise grew so loud Mom could not hear. A street car bounded down the tracks and nothing but a jumble came out of the machine.

Mom quickly shut it off and ran out to the front door, opened it slightly, careful that nobody saw her. Mrs. Farrell's new radio was roaring:

"down the sidelines, he shakes off a man, two others hit him—oh, how they hit him! — they all go down—and it's over. It's OVER! Big Jeff Randolph has just intercepted a pass and made a sensational run of about ninety yards for a touchdown. . . . That's the game. . . . How they're cheering him. Oh, what a boy! What a football player!"

Mom leaned weakly against the wall, smiling in the darkness.

"Wait a minute. . . . Somebody's hurt. . . . Can't tell who it is. . . . One of the three who went down. . . . They've gathered around him. . . . A doctor is running out. . . ."

Mom knew before they said it. Her lips began to move.

"It's Randolph, Big Jeff Randolph, the star of the game, the greatest all-American of the year. . . . They're bringing out a stretcher from the sidelines. Must be hurt badly. . . . Wait'll I check on this. . . . Hold, please. . . . This may mean the game for Thorndyke because that boy has been Thorndyke today. They're carrying him off now —we'll know in a minute what it is."

Mom was on her knees in the dim doorway.

"Oh, God!" she said fervently, "O, God, in Thy mercy take care of him. He's my wonderful boy, O, God! Don't let it be him. Let it be me, O God! I'm old. He's young. Let it be me, O God! Please let it be me. I'll do anything You say, O God, but save my boy, my little boy."

The voice of the announcer rang through the street.

"There's a report it's his spine. The crowd is still; I'll try to check on that from the hospital. They're taking him to the hospital. I'll try to have it before the game is over. . . . Number 19, is running out to take his place—that's Temple, a good punter but not an offensive man. Well, Big Jeff left them the game. All they have to do is hold it now. They're lining up. Temple is going to try for that extra point."

His spine! A broken neck; a broken back, paralysis.

This was the end of Tommy.

But still Mom prayed: "Make it a mistake, O God . . . You can do it, God. . . . Take me now in his place; let it be me, O God, let it be me!" . . .

She fell in the doorway.

When Mom awoke she was on the couch in the front room downstairs and the place was full of people. Doctor Long was bending over her. Mom couldn't imagine what had happened for a minute. Doctor Long was smiling like he always did when she called him for something that didn't amount to anything. Mom felt foolish with everybody around—even Mrs. Farrell. Then she remembered. She tried to get up but the family doctor firmly held her, still smiling as though it were just a case of colic.

"If you must do things like this worrying about that big son of yours then you just stay here and rest for awhile," he said, being severe as he did with children. "I think the ones she should worry about were those California boys, eh Jim?"

"Sure," Pop said, "whenever they hurt Tom it'll be a fine day. You lay still now, Lizzie, and rest up."

Mom looked around. Mrs. Flannigan, Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Farrell, Cousin Emmie and Steve; Steve and Cousin Emmie had aprons on —they must be getting supper. It must have been a long time since she had fainted. Tommy must be all right; still, they hadn't just said so. Pete came in with a bucket of coal for the fire in the grate.

"Hy, Mom—how's the pepper?" He came over to her side and she took his hand. Mom was kind of weak. Steve came and stood by Pete but didn't say anything, just looked—Steve was one of the kind that did. Mom felt good with them together there. It was a picture—and a promise. If anything happened to her, Pete would be taken care of almost as well as his own mother would do—and Pop, too.

"Is he all right, Pete?" Mom felt that Pete wouldn't fool her. Pete knew it, too. He said: "He'll be all right, Mom—you know Tom. I'll bet he's eating a big meal right now—you know how he can eat."

Mom smiled. She knew Pete wanted her to smile; still, Pete hadn't really said Tom was all right.

"Did the announcer say anything more? Did he check up?"

Mrs. Johnson spoke up quickly. "All he said, Mis' Randolph was there was a report that it wasn't nothin' serious. Now you just be still and don't worry."

"Sure, Mis' Randolph," Mrs. Flannigan said, "you be keerful and be still, like Doctor Long says."

Mrs. Farrell said, real nice: "Now you just got nothin' to take on about, Mis' Randolph—if you'd a heard them cheerin' Tommy and all the nice things they said about him when it was over—I tell you it was just grand. I tell you if it was my Joie they was cheerin' that way I'd be dancin' a jig."

Mom smiled. The poor thing was trying to be nice. It was always that way in time of trouble. Mom said: "Your Joie is a good boy, too, Mis' Farrell."

Out in the kitchen Mom saw Florrie Johnson washing the dishes. She didn't want Florrie in her house but it was always the ones talked about the most that seemed to have the biggest hearts.

The door opened and Uncle Louie came in. Mom could see he had been having a little New Year's cheer. Well, the poor old fellow didn't have much enjoyment out of life. He looked at her.

"Take it easy, Lizzie," he said, "I still don't believe it."

Mom's heart began to beat. She knew they had been keeping something from her. She saw Doctor Long and Pop looking at Uncle Louie and she spoke quickly: "Don't believe what, Uncle Louie?"

"Why there's a report downtown Tom's dead—but I said you—"

Mom felt a cold, clammy hand seize her heart; she shook with a chill. Doctor Long was giving her something to swallow; he was talking: "I tell you it isn't true, Mrs. Randolph; he's been drinking; there are always rumors around. You just depend on what I say."

She felt sinking down. Tommy, with all of his beautiful life before him, just couldn't be gone; it wouldn't be fair, God, it wouldn't be fair. Thy will be done, O Lord, but it wouldn't be fair to take my Tommy!

ALBUMINURIA

ANXIETY AND alarm are often created by the physician's report which states that "you have albumin in the urine". This statement immediately gives rise to the conviction that the sufferer is a victim of that dreaded disease known as Bright's disease. In many instances, the alarm is unwarranted and careful investigation soon reveals that the condition is one of a mild and temporary nature.

Albuminuria, which is the condition in which albumin is found in the urine, can often be traced to some disturbance of the diet; overindulgence in exercise; change of climate or occupation. Of course, it is sometimes the first sign of an infection or irritation of the kidney. Persistent albuminuria is serious and means that some damage has occurred to the kidney.

Under normal conditions, albumin is not present. Occasionally it is found in the individual whose work requires continuous sitting or standing in one position. For this reason this type of albuminuria is spoken of as "orthostatis albuminuria". The albumin quickly disappears when the occupation is changed

The condition is frequently encountered in young men and women who indulge in severe and prolonged athletics. It is also found in those persons who live on an exceptionally high protein diet and eat enormous and intemperate amounts of meat, fish and eggs. Albuminuria is also encountered in certain families showing a tendency towards this affliction. As a rule, it is most commonly found in thin, energetic individuals, rather than in obese persons.

In what I have said I do not mean to imply that albuminuria should be neglected. But its presence does not necessarily mean that you are a victim of Bright's disease. If repeated tests show the presence of albumin, it is advisable that you follow the diet and instructions given you by your physician. I would advise that you avoid strenuous exercise, and lead a quiet and well regulated life.

In addition to diet and exercise, it is essential that the teeth, sinuses and tonsils be examined for possible points of infection.

Avoid cold baths, cold weather, and protect yourself against exposure to dampness. If you "catch cold," take the necessary measures for a prompt cure. Above all, it is essential that you report to your doctor. Periodic health examinations are important

Answers to Health Queries

The trouble is probably due to a bad stomach and palpitation of the heart. 3: Is it advisable to eat bread with the meals? I am troubled with gas and wondered if the bread would cause the trouble.

A.—Probably due to "gas". Watch your diet and elimination. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question. 2: Try to improve your general health. Rifles From England

During the Civil war the United States bought over 428,000 Enfield rifles from Great Britain. These were models dating from 1858 onward. They were of .577 caliber and used .58 caliber United States cartridges.

Bob Gore Apparently Not Going Back to Puerto Rico

WASHINGTON — Apparently Bob Gore, Governor of Puerto Rico, is not going back. Young Teddy Roosevelt, former Governor of the island, has been asked by his cousin in The White House to suggest names of good gubernatorial candidates. Gore has brought his family with him back to the United States, but denied any intention of resigning. He came for medicial attention at John Hopkins, he said, and he would be returning to his post shortly.

The President has given orders to the AAA to rush through a code for whiskey distillers. He wants something accomplished before repeal becomes effective . . . . . In the rush it looks as if the distillers might get away with cutting aged whiskey to the extent of ten quarts for one. The new product would be made of alcohol, water and a little flavoring . . . . Most significant of all it would break down the Agricultural Department's drive for consumers' standards . . . For years, Dr. Harvey Wiley, pure food crusader, preached the effect on health of inadequately aged whiskey . . . Another effect probably will be continued bootlegging. After all what will be the difference between good whiskey cut 10 to 1 and Maryland rye aged a few months in the keg? . . . Just before he sailed for Montevideo, Cordell Hull, mountaineer Secretary of State, got a violent case of stage fright. He went to Roosevelt and asked to be excused from going . . . He said the withdrawal of economic questions from the conference agenda left nothing for him to discuss . . . What he really wanted to avoid was the record of two international failures — London and Montevideo. Roosevelt would not listen.

Harold Ickes, honest Secretary of the Interior, is a gladiolus expert. At his Winetka home he cultivates some of the best varieties in Illinois . . . In Washington he has not had time even to raise zinnias . . . Usually he does not get home until eight o'clock . . . The Treasury is suspicious of the number of marks issued by Germany. Officials are wondering whether the new Hitler Government has issued more marks than set by the amount of gold in the German treasury. As a result, the Secret Service is scanning German currency to see if there are any German notes bearing serial numbers not officially listed. This would be a dead give-away.

The State Department is not anxious to favor French wines when the liquor embargo finally is lifted . . . French default on the War Debt plus French quotas against American goods will throw all vintage preferences to Argentine and Chile.

Tariffs to Go Up

The boosting of tariff rates under the NRA and AAA is imminent . . . This is provided for under the Recovery Acts and is to compensate for the processing tax, higher wages, and other increased costs of production . . . The devaluation of the dollar also makes the step more immediate . . . The man who is rushing the whiskey code through the AAA for Roosevelt is Clarence Willingdon, son of a Methodist preacher. . . . Maxim Litvinov lost a lot of friends his unofficial predecessors had made by the secretive manner in which he conducted his White House negotiations . . . The Russian Commissar of Foreign Relations has a complex about secrecy and never is so happy as when he is creating an air of mystery about even such commonplaces as brushing his teeth.

The pretzel industry is up in arms. The AAA has classified it as a mere branch of the baking industry, whereas pretzelers claim that pretzel bending is a distinct and separate profession. . . Any baker can bake bread, they said, but the manner of bending a pretzel requires real artistry. So they demand a separate code.

Louey Howe was the secret author of the White House statement striking economic questions out of the agenda of the Pan-American Conference. When it came over to the State Department, the diplomates were up in arms . . . So also were Latin Americans. They had spent two years drafting the agenda with the concurrence of the United States, and with one stroke Louey Howe ripped it to pieces . . . .

The split in the Roosevelt family regarding gold-buying still continues . . . His conservative Treasury advisers are centering their attack on depreciation in the value of government bonds . . . They emphasize that the banks of the country are loaded with Government bonds. So are the insurance companies . . . If these bonds drop materially they tell Roosevelt there may be another run on the banks.

"SONG" WINNERS

Harold Allen and Elizabeth Dowden were winners of the "Song Guessing" contest at the Cliftona theatre.

MOVIES

AT THE GRAND

Superstition is apparently a thing of the past with the cast members of "Footlight Parade," the Warner Bros. musical picture now at the Grand theatre. This applies equally to everyone from Jimmy Cagney and Joan Blondell to the members of the chorus. A live black cat required in several scenes, and once regarded as an omen of ill-luck, wandered around the big stage, when not actually working in scenes, without causing the slightest nervousness to anyone present.

AT THE CLIFTONA

The secret is out: Maurice Chevalier sings in his morning bath . . . sometimes. And when he does, Hollywood song-writers are happy. Lee Robin and Ralph Rainger tell why. They have composed twenty-odd songs for Chevalier, including the tunes for his latest Paramount picture, "The Way to Love," which comes to the Cliftona Theatre, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

When Rainger has completed the music to a song and Robin has written the lyrics, Chevalier is invited to their office to hear the interpretation—with Rainger playing and Robin singing.

They play the song several times for Chevalier who goes on his way without comment.

But, if Chevalier arises the next morning with the song in his heart and on his lips—it's "sold." If he's not in the singing mood while performing his morning ablutions, the song isn't what he wants.

By this invariable method the star has selected such song hits as "Louise," "Mimi," "My Ideal," "Park in Paree," "Look What I've Got," "One Hour With You," and a score of others.

Ann Dvorak plays the leading feminine role with Edward Everett Horton contributing the comedy in "The Way to Love." Norman Taurog directed.

In his latest picture, "The Way to Love," a Paramount picture, Maurice Chevalier makes love to the dainty Ann Dvorak, at the Cliftona Theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Just Before the Shooting Started

By IRVIN S. COBB

JUST before hostilities ended in 1918, a young lieutenant of my acquaintance was detailed to duty as a drill officer at camp of colored draft troops in Mississippi. When he got back home after the armistice he told this story:

He said that late one night he was returning from a nearby target to his quarters. As he neared the sentry lines, out of the darkness came a voice calling "Halt!"

He halted, gave the countersign and started on. Immediately, in the gloom, there was a rattle as of a rifle being shifted in the sentry's hands and again the same voice cried: "Halt!"

"You've halted me once already," he said sharply, rightly figuring that the unseen one must be a green trooper, "and I've given you the password. What more do you want?"

"But, boss," said the sentry, drawing nearer, "I don't know you."

"Very probable," said the captain. "What has that got to do with it?"

"It's got a whole heap to do with it. W'en de Sergeant put me yere tonight he p'intedly sez to me dat if somebody comes by which is a stranger to me I is to cry 'Halt!' th'ee times and den shoot 'im."

Interest, Capacity, Opportunity

From "How to Study"—A Guidance Handbook.

Every high school student has a desire to be, and do something worth while. The only difficulty you have with this desire is, is it worth the price? We soon learn that hard work is necessary to succeed in high school. We also learn that there is much of the responsibility of what we do unloaded upon us.

We may have the ability and intelligence to be a leader in our classes but our work shows only average or even below average. The teachers and students rank us by what we do and not by what we could do. After we have made our places in the school, it is more difficult to win a higher place than a lower one. When you see the situation as it is, and desire to win a higher place, tell no one about it. When you do tell some one about your ambitions half the battle is lost. Let others see for themselves what you are doing and they will tell you.

You should get acquainted with the meanings of three words in order to do what is suggested here. The words are capacity, interest and opportunity. You possibly can recall from your past experiences at least one time when you did a long and hard day's work; or you may have walked a long distance. This tested your capacity as far as your physical strength is concerned. Your mental capacity is rarely tested in this way, since most people will not work up to their capacity.

Chillicothe Girl Reserves Are Guests of Local Club

MRS. WILLIAM ULM ADDRESSES GROUP, ON GIRL RESERVES CODE

One of the big social events of the school year at C. H. S. was the joint Girl Reserves meeting held Thursday evening at the Methodist church. At this meeting the Chillicothe group was the guests of the Circleville club. Seventy were present.

A feature of the evening was the address of Mrs. William Ulm one of the local advisers. Mrs. Ulm used as her subject the Girl Reserves code, Dependability and Sincerity.

The welcome address was given by the president, Mary Ellen Kirkpatrick. There followed the evening's program: A piano solo, by Virginia Caskey, a vocal solo, by Miss Johnda Tootle poem by Lydia Given, vocal solo by Elizabeth Dowden, violin solo by Vera Zaenglein; and Mrs. Ulm's address.

Refreshments consisted of fruit salad, sandwiches, and cocoa.

The visiting president invited the Circleville Girl Reserves to Chillicothe in January. A definite date will be set later.

At the close all joined hands in a friendship circle singing the Girl Reserves song, "Follow the Gleam," after which Bernice Liston sounded taps on the trumpet.

The Athletic and Nature group of the Junior Girl Reserves had their first hike today. Their destination was Dewey Park. The hike was under the supervision of Miss Hitler.

A Tale of Two Jugs

(With Apologies to Floyd Dunlap)

Pete Moseby was one tough guy. The reason was he lived in a tough country—the hills of Kentucky.

Pete was in the undertaking business and the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages, and did a little horse trading on the side. All three businesses went hand in hand as you will see. In fact some of his best customers in the alcholic business dealt with him in the undertaking business; and in several instances a few customers who had traded horses with him also had further dealing with Pete. So you see Pete never lost their business, coming or going.

It was one hot day in "Juggersville." In fact it was one of those days that dried you up and blew you away. Pete always attended to his business personally because he always said that "too many cooks would spoil the broth."

Pete was head over heels in work. He had to deliver ten gallons of whiskey, a team of horses, and the corpse of old "Red Eye" Jones to Whiskey Switch. It was going to cost him plenty to make three trips so he decided to load them all on together. "Red Eye" went on first, then the jugs, and then Pete got in and they started off.

On his way he kept patting himself on the back as he thought of the little job he was "putting over" on the prohibition agents.

At the forks Pete decided to take the high road, because the agents did not often frequent this road. At the top Pete was ordered to stop and be searched. Just then Pete started down the hill with the agents prusuing him.

As he rode along he recalled that "Red Eye" had a craving for speed. Well, he was surely going to get plenty of speed now.

They were fast approaching "Dead Man's Curve," and when they hit the curve the horses went one way, "Red Eye" the other, and the agents still a third. Pete was undecided, so he went with "Red Eye" over the cliff.

After the dust had settled, Pete was in jail, the horses in the glue factory, the prohibition agents in the hospital and "Red Eye" was under the sod.

Oh, yes, the jugs! Well, they landed in the river, and although the contents were somewhat weakened by river water, they seemed to satisfy the chief of legal activities of "Whiskey Switch."

stitutions to look after it would be the proper thing for the next congressman to be from Chillicothe. Ross is also the largest county in the district.

McKENZIE, TOO

But Mr. Day's candidacy is not the final word from Ross-co. It is reported that Judge Wilbur McKenzie of common pleas court is aspiring to the job. It is entirely possible, however, that Judge McKenzie, one of Ross-co's most popular men, will not run this time but will wait two years.

If Judge McKenzie does not come out for the office you can bet your boots Mr. Underwood will again be a candidate. Underwood looks with much favor upon Judge McKenzie, who, incidentally, is not the man Garrett Claypool, district committeeman, would have run for the office.

Mr. Underwood, who has been here a couple of times in recent months in regard to postmastership and Robert L. Immell of Yellowbud, has intimated that he will be a candidate if Judge McKenzie is not, but if Judge McKenzie does run that he will not enter the fight.

Many things may happen between now and the August, 1934, primary, when governors, congressmen, senators and county officials will be selected by their parties.

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

MOST everybody is going to Europe or coming back now. Some of the ones that go for the first time have a hard time finding their way around the boat. There was a lady on one of the big ships that went to a steward and says, "Say, I don't know where my room is, and I left my key in my room."

"Do you know what deck you're on, lady?"

"No, I don't remember that either. I went to sleep last night, and then forgot all about it. But say, I remember now. My window was right opposite a big stone lighthouse. You ought to know where that room is, steward."
